

I had a secret meeting in the basement of my brain.

LOCATION: curled up on my couch

MOOD:  chipper

MUSIC: The National - Brainy

You could be listening to The National's Boxer right now.

(<https://www.livejournal.com/away?to=http%3A//www.lala.com/%23song/1225260599474461518>)

This has been your public service announcement for the duration of Lala, which is not very long now.

Curse you, Steve Jobs!

...not that that's going to stop me from buying your toys. I can't help it. I'm a hip, urban ~~metrosexual~~ scruffy climber bum, and your marketing strikes through the very heart of me.

You could also listen to the new album streaming live.

An entire generation has been carefully crafted to respond positively to his sly words and designs.

Kinda. It's not that their advertising is tuned to the current disposable-income generation, it's that the cdig has been tuned to respond to their type of advertising. Bo? Ka.

We all thought Steve Jobs was the woman with no sports bra. But it turns out he was the other guy.

So I was like ~~three~~ thirteen months old when this ad came out....

ETA: I knew what I meant, by gum!

My adorable overhyped phone has a cowbell ap.

So I can play cowbell when I need more.

It also has an ocarina ap. And you can listen to random other anonymous people play virtual ocarina.

Some of them are very good.

My Kindle lets me love Gutenberg more thoroughly. All those books that I never thought I'd see....

Oh, yeah! And they've started including formats (like mobi) that will translate the pictures so you can get them on your eBook! Mmmm
